We might trivialize the biblical notion that even gets repeated in the Lord's Prayer (2).

When questioned by snake face (2), Eve dutifully repeats what God has told about the death sentence (2).

It's like a politician who is going to do the best-est of best things.

It's bi-partisan shoe that fits remarkably well.

He isn't going to start thinking until God points an accusatory divine digit at him.

As long as we can deny God's existence and presence, we can justify almost anything.

Lent is the period when we assess ourselves and the settings on our compass with God.

Jesus can show off his self-sufficiency.

Rather it's a corruption of biblical understanding.

Even the most righteous may be tempted to take it all.

For the faithful, God must be professed as Sovereign Lord (2) of all creation and its destiny.
