Driving is an aggressive survival skill.

You drive in and make them adjust to your entry.

We may find that our expectations were woefully off base (2) in assessing an enterprise.

They couldn't call down a taxi much less call fire down from heaven.

The next man wants to say good - bye (2) to his family, echoing Elisha's reply to Elijah.

A farmer would consider himself blessed to have one ox (2) for plowing.

The lack of verbal reply (2) may be irrelevant after we hear what Elisha does.

Serving the Lord, we begin to have a new life (2) designed within our faithfulness that won't look much like the former life (2).

Have we rejected contentment and complacency?

Have we advanced in generosity and sacrifice?

The process is never complete (2), at least until we depart this life, so that question, "what's next," remains a constant.
